

Sister's Spin

January 27, 2021

The saints of this last week of January are really interesting. They all have something to do with education. Take St. Paul--after his own conversion, he worked to educate the Gentile Nations about God through his preaching and letters. Then you have Titus and Timothy--two of Paul's converts who went on to continue his work. Today we celebrate St. Angela Merici, founder of one of the first women's religious communities to teach the poor and especially girls, and finally, St Thomas Aquinas, patron of students and one who studied God in order to grow in his own love of God. As we approach Catholic Schools Week, these giants of the education world have much to teach us as we continue in their footsteps as educators of today.

-Sister Marcianne

