What would you do if you had a million dollars? That was the question facing Katherine Drexel when her parents both died and left her a great fortune. Katherine is another one of our American born saints and a woman of our times. She died in 1955--not really that long ago. She used her share of her inheritance to establish a new religious congregation to serve the needs of Native Americans and African Americans, She also started the first university for African Americans--XAVIER U.. in Louisiana. She is the patron saint of social justice issues. and can serve as a reminder in this Lenten Season that even if you don't have a million dollars, you can give a little--in time or money--to further the cause of social justice issues here and around the world.
