

Sister's Spin

September 30, 2020

Have you thanked a librarian lately? Today may be a good day to do that and you may ask St. Jerome to bless your local librarian. He is the patron saint of librarians and today is his feast day. He is most known for his translation of the Sacred Scriptures from the Hebrew into the Latin language, and his translation lasted long in the history of our Church. He is also known as a man who had a great temper, but also great remorse when he failed to keep that temper in check. Yet, he became a saint in spite of this fault, so there is hope for all of us, too! Pick up your Bible today and read/meditate on a few passages in honor of St. Jerome.
