How has Covid-19 affected you?

The 4th quarter of the 2019-2020 school year was met with a lot of uncertainty. Through it all, our teachers and students prevailed. They were able to embrace the opportunity to teach and learn in different ways. In the next couple of pages you will find some thoughts of the teachers and students as well as some photos of how the 2019-2020 school year looked very different.

"He will make sure that I always have everything I need with plenty left over to share with others." - 2 Corinthians 9:8

Note from the Dean of Students

During these trying times I would like to highlight some of the amazing things some of our teachers accomplished having to adapt to distance learning for their students. We really have a great faculty here who valued their time to make sure there still was a learning process going on no matter what other schools were doing. They also contacted the students and parents about issues they may have had in regards to homework etc. For instance, Mr. Accardi held a dissection project from his garage with the ability for his students to interject questions and answers while the project was proceeding. He also presented a project of ice treatments and lower extremity tests for injuries in his Athletic Training class. In his drivers Ed class he instructed through Google classroom so all of his students could stay on the level he needed while learning such important and essential assignments in their lives.

Mrs. Verdick also did very impressive distance learning projects by having 4 guest speakers with talk and answer periods for her students to help grasp the knowledge at hand. She also had a virtual tour of the Chief Medical Examiner's Office of the state of Maryland including the autopsy room. WOW! These are just a few examples of how our teachers adapted to make sure our students were still learning and not just passing by. They accepted the challenge of not having the usual teaching process and went to this distance learning process and kept our students engaged. I applaud our entire staff for their efforts. GREAT JOB !

My Senior Year

by Clare Sanders

When August 2019 rolled around, all I could think about was graduation. Finally. I wanted to fast forward to the end. The moment where I walked across that stage and grabbed my diploma. On May 1st, we were all supposed to wear our college gear for Decision Day. I couldn't wait for my last prom, dancing the night away with all of my classmates to bowling until our eyes felt heavy. I wanted that moment where I walked those halls for the last time as a student. Those final months with my classmates where we watched each other grow into adults. I wanted to say goodbye.

Now today is May 15th: my last day. Instead of shutting my locker and walking the halls for a final time, I'm leaving Google Classrooms and closing my computer. The stage for graduation is closed. The dance floor for prom collects dust. The only time I see my classmates' faces is over Google Meets. There was no "last hurrah". We didn't go out with a "bang". We went out with a whisper of what should have been.

Yet, I refuse to look back on my high school career with only regret and sadness for the last few months. It was so much more than that, we were so much more than that. Someone once told me, "It's not the final moment that matters, it's all the moments that led up to it." Our class has had four years together, these final moments are not our undoing.

We laughed together, creating chaos in the classroom. We cried together when we lost people who were part of our family. We won and lost games fighting for the blue and white. We danced together until there were bruises on our feet. We grew up together, seeing all the dark and light parts of each other. We lived with each other. For the last four years, 185 days a year, we lived and breathed the same air as our classmates. It's hard to accept that we are saying goodbye in this way, but we choose how we look back. We can look back on our time at Newman as a blessing and cherish our memories, or we can throw ourselves a pity party.

The amazing part about Newman is that we don't stop belonging to the family after graduation, we merely switch roles. To all my fellow seniors, congratulations, we made it. We are adults, and we should be proud of ourselves and everything we have accomplished together. Time for the next chapters of our lives.

Teacher Perspective

March 13, 2020 brought forth an announcement that we would be closing school buildings and initiating remote learning for a few weeks. Those few weeks turned into the remainder of the 2019-2020 school year. Throughout this unprecedented time we remain #NewmanStrong.

Our teachers began remote learning on Monday, March 16th, without losing a beat! We distributed IT equipment to those in need for required learning as we kept in communication with families and students via email, our website and social media. Teachers met each Monday via Google Meet to track progress and get important updates.

Celebrating our successes in this transitional way of teaching and learning does not make up for the daily face to face contact with students that makes our worlds go 'round.

When asked, Science teacher, Mrs. Beth Verdick, writes about remote learning, "It was a great opportunity to Google Meet with people in the fields of science which I hope to be able to do again when we are back in school." She also indicated that the main downside of remote learning is how rough it was to be able to get work in from some students, understanding their frustration of not having the chances to ask questions when working on their homework, missing out on hands on learning opportunities and the challenging ways of having to do assessments to ensure the students know the content.

Math teacher, Mrs. Melissa Rhodes submitted the following: "Wow, this last quarter was surely a crazy one! I was elated to see all of my students' faces and videos for the first time after we went on quarantine.

We found many apps to use to drop each other videos and communicate our prayer requests. Many of my students reached out to me with questions which had us screen sharing and taking quizzes together. Maybe not their definition of fun, but I sure enjoyed my one-on-one time with them.. My biggest take away as a teacher was how much I need to be with my students to feel like I have accomplished something. Teaching is my passion, and it sure is not the same when done virtually. We survived and made the best of it. Although I will spend time preparing for all possibilities in the fall, I am praying it arrives with me in a classroom setting welcoming in my new students!

In the Blink of an Eye by Jaxson Schabacker

High School is four years long on a calendar. 1,460 days worth of ideas and memories. There is no word to sum up these four years: there may not even be a phrase or parable. I believe there is only one way to explain what high school is. Experience.

My high school career was trimmed a bit slim. I thought this break would be good. It was to an extent. It was nice to be able to take a step back from the craziness of high school. I was able to be ill-advised and hang out with friends, take days off, and figure out a little bit about myself. Although, as the break drags on, I realize what I've forgotten. I've forgotten what it means to be a kid. I've got two months before adulthood hits. I was able to take a look at my life is right now. I've just recently committed to play college football, I'm working through the enrollment process, and I will be fully enrolled and ready to go to Benedictine University in the fall. I realized something further though. I just made the decision that will frame the rest of my life from my bedroom, alone. I was not announcing to my parents, they were at work. I was not announcing to my friends, they were at home. I was not surrounded by the ones I loved. Instead, because of our current national situation, I was alone.

I'd be lying if I said I wasn't saddened by my situation. I can't shake the hand of my future head coach. I couldn't see the look on my mom's face as she realizes her child is becoming an independent adult. I didn't have the satisfaction of being surrounded by those that are important to me. This virus has ruined many things for many people, but all the great stories have bumps in the road. Some people felt this bump harder than others. I feel for all of the spring athletes. They don't have the opportunities of displaying their skills to impress colleges. They don't get one last season. They don't get one last chance. Their careers have been crippled by something out of their control, and that has to be one of the hardest things to overcome.

The class of 2020 has been through a lot and achieved greatness. We've collectively won two state titles, fourth in the state, sectional and regional champions in many sports and many years, and had some undefeated seasons. We also threw two dances, raised a lot of money, and brought a good name to Newman while doing it. We can't mope around like all of high school was a waste because the home stretch got bogged down by outside influences. We have to remember who we are, what we've done, and what we have yet to do. We all remember what freshman year was like. We didn't have a clue what we were doing. We figured it out though.

We pulled ourselves together through hardships and heartaches. We rolled with the punches and did what had to be done. What I'm trying to say is that this is nothing. E-learning? We've had to teach ourselves before. Isolation? We've always had times where we needed some distance. Sleep? Who's that? We've seen all of this before. We're just seeing it differently now.

As I write this paper at 4 a.m., I'm a couple hours away from having to open up the classroom and go through a B Day. Adversity breeds growth, and we've grown through these short four years because we've done it together. Mr. Somers always said eventually we'd come together as a unit and we could get through anything in our way. This is just another bump in the road in the long, winding road that was high school. We didn't have much time to take it all in because it was gone in the blink of an eye.

Spring Sports Cancelled

With the onset of the Covid-19 pandemic our student athletes and coaches lost out on their spring season. Many of the students continued to practice and work out on their own and really took great pride in keeping in top shape. You may view a short video tribute to our spring athletes by visiting the Quick Links tab on our website. The video is named Spring 2020 Sports.

Track Coach Mr. Accardi says it best when he tells his athletes that “you can’t let your career be based on one race, one meet, one season. As you know the true race is always with yourself. If you have learned one thing from me, it is that the true ‘win’ in life is pushing yourself harder and farther than you thought you could and that God will give you strength to finish any ‘race’ if you just believe.”

2019 State Football Champions

In Case You Missed It, The 2019 Comets Football Team brought home some hardware. At the time of publishing the Fall 2019 Newman News the team was heading to the semifinal game facing Fieldcrest on November 23rd.

The team prevailed and moved on to the State Championship game where they faced the Nashville Hornets with a 35-14 win.

Congratulations, to Coach K on his first state title as

Newman Comets Winter Sports

There was plenty of excitement during our winter sports and activities season! For our seniors this was their last high school athletic season. The entry of Covid-19 into our lives changed everything for a lot of students and families. As for the underclassmen, organized sporting events and practices will more than likely look very different going forward. Something that stands out about the Athletic Program at Newman Central Catholic is the life lessons provided by our coaches. It is an amazing accomplishment to bring home hardware but just like life, the journey is the most important part. Please enjoy the following highlights provided by our coaching staff.

Wrestling

The Comets Wrestling Team had an amazing year. Two of the gentlemen advanced to State. Senior, Kyle Tunink, and Sophomore, Will Rude. Will traveled to the State tournament as an alternate and when one of the competitors didn't make weight he was able to grapple. Kyle Tunink brought home the IHSA Class 1A Championship in the 152# weight class. Passion and dedication pays off!

At the time of this publication the team was in the process of planning an awards ceremony on Google Meets. Coach Dieterle is looking forward to sharing some special recognition with the team at that time. Congratulations to all of

Girls Basketball

Coach Salvatori submitted the following recap about the Lady Comets 2019-2020 Basketball Season.

"The girls basketball program had the best basketball season in 11 years!! Last year we went 18-12 while this year we achieved our goals and bettered that record. We had an overall record of 20-9 and a conference record of 11-1, winning our Conference Champion-
