

Sister's Spin

October 21, 2021

This has been a week filled with the celebration of many saints--except for today. From Luke, the North American Martyrs, who watered the soil of our continent with their blood, St. Paul of the Cross, John Paul II and finally on Saturday, St. Juan of Capistrano, the week holds a variety of religious heroes in the Faith. All give us examples of fidelity to the Gospel Message and show us ways to live our own Christian lives each day. Perhaps this empty day is waiting for someone from our time to fill it by their actions and prayers. On Saturday, the swallows at the Mission of San Juan Capistrano will begin their "winter vacation" and leave the Mission to summer in South America. May their flight remind us that God takes care of all the creatures created and cares for us, too. Maybe not with a flight to a warm paradise as the cold of winter approaches, but with some other type of surprise. Be on the lookout for one!
